

Relaxation of media ownership rules jeopardizes the public interest. What is needed in informing the public is not less but more diversity, and dropping regulations will certainly result in narrowing information options. I urge the FCC to maintain the present strictures governing media.